TOOTS PAKA IS GOING TO LONDON

Buffalo Inquirer: Toots Paka, who dances the hula-hula at the Star Theater in Bessie McCoy's company that is presenting "The Echo," is one of the few genuine Hawaiians on the American stage. Like the old time Southern darkies, the natives of Hawaii have been singing for many generations weird, crooning, haunting airs. In the olden times these songs were accompanied by musicians who played on rough instruments, but with the advent of the white man the Hawaiians improved their musical instruments, taking with especial fondness to the guitar. There are many marvelous performers on the guitar on the islands, and one of them has been brought to this country by Miss Paka. He plays when the hula-hula girl appears in "The Echo," and few grand opera airs ever commended closer attention than he does when he plays his own version of "My Rosary."

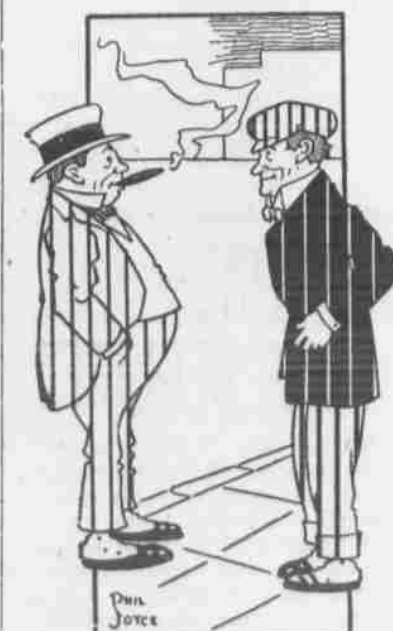

Toots Paka's dances are an exhibition of a peculiar kind of nimbleness. Personally, she is of striking appearance, tall, large-framed, with flashing black eyes and long, lanky black hair. She wears a robe of dazzling colors, and further shows the fondness of the native Kanaka for gimeracks and gewgaws by wearing as many rings on her fingers and as many bracelets as her strong supple wrists will sustain. Although primarily a dancer, Miss Paka is an actress of more repute. She has been at the head of her own companies in Honolulu. Following her engagement in "The Echo," she has offers to take her present company to London for a long stay. This offer she declares she is likely to accept, as she is sure her dancing will be a distinct success in the British metropolis.

AN ARTIFICIAL EARTHQUAKE.

New York's "artificial earthquake," caused by the explosion of 25 tons of dynamite, is the subject of two pages of illustrations appearing in the March number of Popular Mechanics Magazine. An article states that, at the rate at which explosives are being used at the Panama Canal, 25 short tons of dynamite, the amount exploded at Jersey City, would excavate 140,000 cubic yards of rock. If this rock were to be piled straight up on a city building lot measuring 150 by 50 feet, it would tower to a height exceeding 500 feet. Such is the disruptive power of 25 tons of dynamite.

MOVING PICTURES

MADE OUTDOORS
It has been left to the enterprise of a body of men eager to advertise their city to overcome the darkness of night as an obstacle to the making of motion pictures. Those who viewed moving pictures of the "Priests of Pallas" night parade held in Kansas City, Mo., last year, in their appreciation of the beautiful floats, doubtless overlooked the extreme difficulties that were overcome in preparing them for the screen. Moving pictures made at night mark a wonderful advance in the photographic art. Reproductions of some of the views appear in the March number of Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MIGHT WANT TO LEAVE HIM.
"Strikeout Jones of this town's gettin' a chance to show what he can do with the big leagues down South, but to my mind there's one bad sign about it."
"What's that?"
"The manager only bought his ticket the one way."

BIG HUNT.
With the season closed for big game in the state of Washington, a band of enthusiasts in Spokane is preparing for a hunt of impressive proportions that will mean all the better sport during the open season next fall. It will be a war on cougars, wildcats, coyotes, hawks, and other beasts and birds such as prey on the game species. This huge hunt will be continued for a month, with the men divided into teams, and with a scoring system to regulate the number of points according to the number and variety of the pests killed. Inasmuch as there is a bounty on most of these beasts, with some revenue assured from sale of pelts, it will be a sort of self-sustaining enterprise.

But the important phase of it is the protection that will be effected for the game that is preserved by a closed season during the greater part of the year. In all the western states the efficient administration of the game wardens has checked wanton slaughter; the large and more highly prized animals are, as a result, increasing notably in numbers. Even though hunters may reach the limit imposed by the law, the natural increase of the various deer families more than offsets the aim of the nimrod. Where there is any danger of approximate extinction of any species, the season has been closed the year around until the numbers approach normal again. But the mountain lion and his kindred never observed such regulations, and the toll of the hunter is small beside the tribute levied by such predatory beasts. The worst slaughter comes when the timid animals are safe from man, but are helpless before the stealthy foe. When deep snows offset the fleetness of foot and keenness of perception deer and elk are at the mercy of the hungry cougar, and every one of the latter which the hunt-kill will mean possible prey for dozens of the prized and mals.—Anaconda Standard.
